HOW TO CURE CONSUMPTION.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF DR. SCHENCK'S GREAT MEDICINES.—Will people never learn to know that a diseased liver and stomach necessarily disease the entire system? The plainest principles of common sense teach this and yet there are hundreds who ridicule the idea, and continue in the course which almost certainly brings them prematurely to the grave. Living as the majority of the people do, at complete variance with the laws of nature, it must be apparent to all that, sooner or later, nature will revenge herself. Hence we find that persons who indulge to excess in the use of very rich or indigestible food or intoxicating drinks, invariably pay a heavy penalty in the end. The stomach becomes disordered and refuses to act: the liver fails to perform its functions, dyspepsia and its attendant evils follow, and still the suffering individuals persist in clinging to the thoroughly exploded idea of the past. Dr. SCHENK'S medicines are recommended to all such. They bring sure and certain relief wherever they are used as directed, and all that is necessary to establish their reputation with every ailing man or woman in the lands a fair and impartial trial of them. Let those who are skeptical on this point, and who have permitted interested persons to prejudice them against these now celebrated remedies for consumption, discard their prejudices, and be governed by the principles of reason and common sense. If the system is disordered depend upon it, in nine cases out of ten the seat of the disorder will be found in the stomach and liver. To cleanse and invigorate the stomach and to stimulate the liver to healthy action, use

SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS.—The daily increasing demand for these pills in the best evidence of their value. Thousands upon thousands of boxes are sold daily. Why? Simply because they act promptly and efficiently. Invalids who may not find it convenient to call on Dr. SCHENCK in person are informed that full and complete directions for use accompany each package of the MANDRAKE PILLS, PULMONIC SYRUP AND SEAWEED TONIC.—These medicines will cure consumption unless the lungs are so far gone that the patient is entirely beyond the reach of medical relief.

It may be asked by those who are not familiar with the virtues of these great remedies, "How do Dr. Schenck's medicines effect their wonderful cures of consumption?"

The answer is a simple one. They begin their work of restoration by bringing the stomach, liver and bowels into an active healthy condition. It is God that cures the formidable disease. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS act on the liver and stomach, promoting healthy secretion, and removing the bile and slime which have resulted from the inactive or torpid condition of those organs, and of the system generally. This sluggish state of the body, and the consequent accumulation of the unhealthy substances named prevent the proper digestion of food, and, as a natural consequence creates disease, which results in prostration and finally in death.

SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP and SEA-WEED TONIC.—These medicines will cure consumption unless the lungs are so far gone that the patient is entirely beyond the reach of medical relief.

One of the first steps the physician should take with a consumptive patient is to invigorate the system. Now how is this to be done? Certainly not by giving medicines that exhaust and enervate—medicines that impair instead of improve the functions of the digestive organs. Doctor SCHENCK'S medicines cleanse the stomach, and the use of all substances which are calculated to irritate or weaken them. They create an appetite—promote healthful digestion—make good blood, and, as a consequence, they invigorate and strengthen the entire system and more especial by those parts which are diseased. If this cannot be done, then the case must be regarded as a hopeless one.

If the physician finds it impossible to make a patient feel hungry, if the deceased person cannot partake of good nourishing food and properly digest it, it is impossible that he can gain in flesh and strength; and it is equally impossible to bring a patient to this condition so long as the liver is burdened with diseased bile, and the stomach laden with unhealthy slime.

Almost the first request made to the physician by a consumptive patient is that he will prescribe medicines that will allay the cough, night sweats and chills, which are the sure attendants on consumption. But this should not be done, as the cough is only an effort of nature to relieve itself, and the night sweats and chills are caused by the diseased lungs. The patient would be greatly benefited do more harm than good. They impair the functions of the stomach, impede healthy digestion, and aggravate rather than cure the disease.

There is, after all, nothing like facts which to substantiate a position, and it is upon facts that Dr. Schenck's relies. Nearly all who have taken his medicines in accordance with his directions have not only been cured of consumption, but, from the fact that these medicines act with wonderful power upon the digestive organs, patients thus cured speedily gain flesh. Cleansing the system of all impurities, they lay the foundation for a solid, substantial structure. Restoring these organs to health, they create an appetite. The food is properly assimilated, the quantity of blood is not only increased, but is made rich and strong, and in the face of such a condition of the system all disease must be banished.

Full directions accompany each of the medicines, so that it is not absolutely necessary that patients should see Dr. SCHENCK personally, unless they desire to have their lungs examined. For this purpose he is at his office, No. 15 North Sixth St., corner of Commerce, Phila., every Saturday, from 9 A. M. until 1 P. M.

Advice is given without charge, but for a thorough examination with the Respirometer the charge is $5.

Price of the Pulmonic Syrup and Seaweed Tonic each, $1.50 per bottle, or $7 50 a half dozen. Mandrake Pills 25 cents a box. For sale by all druggists. ap.12 ly.

SCATTER SEEDS OF KINDNESS.

Let us gather up the sunbeams
Lying all around our path;
Let us keep the wheat and roses,
Casting out the thorns and chaff;
Let us find our sweetest comfort
In the blessings of to-day,
With a patient hand removing
All the briars from the way.

Strange we never prize the music
Till the sweet-voiced bird has flown!
Strange that we should slight the violets
Till the lovely flowers are gone!
Strange that summer skies and sunshine
Never seem one-half so fair
As when winter's snowy pinions
Shake the white down in the air!

If we knew the baby fingers,
Pressed against the window-pane
Would be cold and stiff to-morrow—
Never trouble us again—
Would the bright eye of our darling
Catch the frown upon our brow?
Would the print of rosy fingers
Vex us then as they do now?

Ah! those little ice-cold fingers
How they point our memories back
To the hasty words and actions
Strewn along our backward track!
How those little hands remind us,
As in snowy grace they lie,
Not to scatter thorns, but roses,
For our reaping by-and-by!

ON EXHIBITION.

BY AMY RANDOLPH.

"Good-by, mamma—and wish me good luck, please!"

"Good-by, Rosamond; but as for my wishes, they can't signify one way or the other. I'm nothing but a forlorn remnant of the olden time!"

Rosamond Gifford turned away from the cracked mirror in its frame of stained pine-wood, and went smilingly out into the nipping November air—a tall, blooming damsel, with deep brown eyes, and a lovely pink and white complexion, whose simple black alpaca dress set off her fresh beauty as an antique vase might relieve a cluster of full blossomed Michigan roses!

"Mamma," said little Helen Gifford, as she put another shovelful of coals on the carefully husbanded fire, "do you feel sorry that Rosa is going to exhibit the sewing machines at the Fair?"

Mrs. Gifford withdrew behind her pocket handkerchief.

"Ah, child, it's well for you that you haven't my sensitive feelings!"

"But, mamma, why shouldn't Rosa sew at a Fair just the same as in the sewing machine rooms on Broadway? Where's the difference, so long as they pay her for it?"

Mrs. Gifford shook her cap borders hysterically.

"I never thought to see the day when a Gifford should be compelled to work for a living—and to work in public too! I only wish I had been dead and buried first!"

"Mamma, don't!" pleaded poor little Helen.

"It would have been a great deal better!" groaned Mrs. Gifford. "I shouldn't have been in the way, with my old-fashioned ideas and notions, then! I hope Walter Moreau sleeps peacefully in his bed; that is all! I know I couldn't, if I had cheated my cousin's children out of their inheritance!"

"But, mamma, how was it cousin Walter's fault, if the law gave him the estate instead of us?"

"Law, indeed! Nonsense! when your poor dear papa always brought me up in expectation that some day Moreau Place would be ours. And to see him step in—a selfish, domineering, heartless—"

"But, mamma, darling, you have never seen him."

"If he had had a solitary instinct of the gentleman about him, he would have invited us all to make our home at Moreau place for the rest of our days."

Helen lifted her eyebrows shrewdly and said, "If we had gained the lawsuit, mamma, I don't think you would have invited Cousin Walter to make it his home at the Place."

"Go and get your knitting, Helen," said Mrs. Gifford petulantly. "There's no reason we should all go barefoot because a hollow-hearted usurper has stolen away our heritage."

And Helen silently obeyed.

Pretty Rosamond Gifford cried a little under her vail, as she hurried along the streets, because her earnest efforts to gain a livelihood were so little appreciated by her mother, but it was nothing more serious than the sparkle of a summer shower, and when she entered the little railed-off booth at the Exhibition, where hersewing machines stood, the sweet, dimpling smile had come back to her lips once again.

"You're a little late this morning, Miss Gifford," was the comment of her chief. "Two or three people have inquired about the new patent attachment already."

So Rosamond sat down, heart and hands alike occupied with the business of the hour, entirely unconscious that she herself was the prettiest object in all the huge room. And the buzz and hum around her, and the roar of distant machinery, and the sound of various voices passing her stand, like the current of some great surging sea, brought no deeper shadow to her cheek, no more rapid throbbing to her heart.

"I am doing my duty," thought Rosamond, as her quick fingers guided the workings of the new patent attachment; "and I couldn't do any more if I were standing at the court of Queen Victoria."

Suddenly the sound of a gentleman's voice close to her made her start.

"See here, Moreau; you are interested in this new improvement, if you are going to supply the industrial schools at your place with sewing machines. It is really the best thing put."

And Rosamond, glancing up through her long, dark eyelashes, saw a tall, well-made gentleman, with bright brown eyes, chestnut locks, and a grave, pleasant mouth, and heard him introduced to her employer as "Mr. Moreau of Moreau Place, in Staffordshire."

The veritable Cousin Walter—the bete noir of her youth and childhood! and Rosamond felt her heart throbbing a pulse or two faster, as the clear brown eyes fell upon her face.

"Miss Gifford, will you be kind enough to run a strip of cloth through the machine? Then, sir, you will perceive the manifest improvement in this latest attachment."

But the stranger was looking, not at the little silvered plate and glancing wheel, but at the fair, flushed face which bent over them.

"Gifford!" he repeated slowly. "I have cousins by the name of Gifford."

"And I am one of those cousins," said Rosamond courageously. "There, you turn this screw a little and it relieves the tension at once, thereby improving the stitch; for—"

"Allow me to claim relationship, then;" and Mr. Moreau frankly held out his hand.

Rosamond hesitated an instant. Her mother would have haughtily repulsed the overtures of friendship, but she and her mother had always held different theories on the subject of Walter Moreau. So she put her hand in his.

"I am glad to meet you," said Moreau. "I should have met you before, but a letter from your mother—"

"Yes," said Rosamond, coloring deeply, "I know how my mother feels. Shall I show you about the machines now?"

"Are you exhibiting them?"

"Yes. I am earning my own living."

Moreau's face lighted up. "And I honor you for it. Yes, you may show me, if you please. I am just ordering a few for some schools I am organizing.

And when Moreau took his leave, the man of sewing machines came gleefully to Rosamond's side. "Your cousin has ordered a dozen, Miss Gifford. I wish we had a few more customers like him!"

Mr. Moreau came again the next day to examine into one or two knotty points respecting the machinery, and staid until Rosamond got up to put on her shawl and bonnet.

"You are going home?" he asked.

"Yes; Miss Morrison takes my place in the evenings," she replied.

"But it is quite dark; you must let me see you home."

"Yes; but—my mother!"

Moreau laughed. "I comprehend. I am no special favorite with her. But I can preserve a prudent incognito.—Let me be Mr. Walters."

And Rosamond, who really was a little timid concerning that long lonely walk in the dusk, and who was beginning to like and trust her new-found relative, consented.

Mrs. Gifford welcomed the new-comer with stately dignity.

"I'm sure I'm very happy to meet you, sir," she said. "Any friend of Rosamond's will always be welcome to me, and I only wish I could receive you in a more fitting manner. We have not always been what we are—nor should we be now, if law and justice were anything but mere meaningless names."

"Indeed!" said Moreau, smiling curiously, while Rosamond felt as if her face were all on fire.

"No, sir," said Mrs. Gifford, the bows on her lace cap quivering with the emphasis she used: "if we had had our rights, we should have been the Giffords of Moreau Place, and my daughter Rosamond, instead of exhibiting sewing machines in a Fair, would have been sitting in silks and velvets. But we have been deprived of our rightful inheritance by a fiend in human shape, named Walter Moreau. Perhaps you may have heard of the great lawsuit?"

"I think I have a faint recollection of it," said Walters gravely.

"Mamma," interrupted Rosamond in a voice of distress, "these—these family matters cannot be interesting to a stranger, and—"

"Excuse me!" said Mrs. Gifford, drawing herself up primly. "Of course I am in the wrong—I always am—only it isn't exactly pleasant to be told of it by my own daughter!"

"Mamma, you know I didn't mean that!"

But Mrs. Gifford declined to be propitiated on any terms; and sat stiff and prim the remainder of the evening, full of unspoken reminiscences of the "great lawsuit."

"He will never come near us again," was Rosamond's regretful thought, as she laid her flushed cheek on the pillow that night, with little Helen's fragrant breath mingling with her own.

But Rosamond was mistaken for once in her life. "Mr. Walters" did come again, the very next evening but one, and again, and yet again!

"You are looking pale, Miss Gifford," he said, the last time.

And it was true.

"It is one of the misfortunes of our reduced station in life," Mrs. Gifford sighed, "that Rosamond is obliged to lead a too sedentary life!"

"A little walk would bring the roses back to your cheek," said Mr. Walters. "It is a lovely moonlight night. Will you come?"

Mrs. Gifford nodded her sanction, and Rosamond put on her tartan shawl and the little round hat with the red-bird's wing in front, and slipped her arm through that of her cousin—for she was learning to believe in him at last.

"Rosamond," said Walter Moreau, after they had walked a little way in silence, "the Fair closes to-morrow."

"Yes," said she regretfully.

"And with it closes your work?"

"Yes. I wish I could hear of some new engagement."

Moreau drew his arm closer in here.

"I know of one, Rosamond; but I don't exactly know whether it would suit you."

"What is it?"

The clear hazel eyes were shining up into his with wistful brilliance.

"I want to engage you, Rosamond—to be my wife."

* * * * * * *

Mrs. Gifford had looked up at the clock half a dozen times, true to her instinct of always worrying about something, before Rosamond came in.

"Child!" she croaked, "do you see what time it is? Where is Mr. Walters?"

"He would not come in. He is coming to see you to-morrow, mamma."

"To see me! What for?"

"Mamma, he has asked me to marry him."

"He is a most gentlemanly person, my dear," said Mrs. Gifford, smiling and bridling. "I shall consent with the greatest pleasure."

"You like him, then, mamma?"

"Certainly I do."

Rosamond came closer to her mother. "Then, mamma, I may venture to tell you that he is our cousin Walter Moreau—that I shall be mistress of Moreau Place, and that you will reign in very truth in the halls of our ancestors you have spoken about so often. And she laughed and cried, both in one breath, upon the old lady's neck.

"Bless my soul!" said Mrs. Gifford, dropping her spectacle case and cracking the lenses square across.

But she made never an objection to the "fiend in human shape." And when the next annual exhibition of the Fair came round, the little railed enclosure devoted to sewing machines was occupied by another young lady in the place of Miss Rosamond Gifford, who had taken to herself another "local habitation and a name!"

☞ An Irish boy trying hard to get a place denied that he was Irish.

"I don't know what you mean by not being an Irishman," said the gentleman who was about to hire him; "but this I do know, that you were born in Ireland."

"Och! your honor, if that's all, small blame to that. Suppose your old cat had kittens in the oven, would they be loaves of bread?"

The boy got the place.

☞ "My son," said an old lady, "how must Jonah have felt when the whale swallowed him?"

"A little down in the mouth, I suppose," was young hopeful's reply.

The Strasbourg Cathedral, Clock, and Library.

One of the most lamentable results of the siege of Strasbourg, leaving out of view the loss of human life, is the injury which the bombardment has inflicted on the noble cathedral and its wonderful astronomical clock. The vast cathedral, which, perhaps, more than any other one thing, has made the name of Strasbourg celebrated, is one of the finest gothic buildings in Europe. It was founded A. D. 504. Choir was built by Charlemagne, probably about A. D. 800, though it was not complete until 1329. The material of which the cathedral is built is a brown-stone, very much resembling our Connecticut Portland free stone, so extensively used in Fifth Avenue, New York. It was obtained from a quarry of Wassebonne, in the valley of Courronne, a few miles from Strasbourg. The architect of the existing edifice was Edwin Von Steinback, of Baden. One John Huells, of Cologne, was the architect of the peerless tower. Its total hight, 466 feet, surpasses St. Peter's, and is about equal to that of the Great Pyramid. The greater part of the entire structure was destroyed by lightning in 1007, and the restored edifice was begun in 1015, and completed in 1439. The cathedral is in every part richly decorated with sculptures; and the western front, rising to a height of 130 feet, is, or was particularly carvings, and bas-reliefs. It has a circular window 48 feet in diameter. The Prussian artillery has made it is said, a ruin of part of the vast building.

The astronomical clock, the product of a German, in about the year 1550, is a marvel of ingenuity and mechanical skill, and has no counterpart. It performs not only the service of a clock, but exhibits the days, the months, and the years; the process of the seasons; the signs of the zodiac, and the names and the movements of the heavenly bodies. At each quarter hour an angel comes out and strikes one stroke on a bell; at every hour another angel comes and strikes twice; and at 12, meridian, a figure of Christ appears, accompanied by the twelve Apostles, all of whom move around a central point and pass in, out of sight by another door, the stroke of twelve being given, and a cock flaps his wings and crows. The clock is enormous in size, like every thing else connected with the vast cathedral, and is invisible from the outside street—the spectator passing through the nave of the cathedral to see it. It has suffered from fire and violence before the present year, having been out of repair and motionless since the revolution of 1793, until 1842, when it was repaired by a watchmaker of Bas-Rhin, and has been in operation since that time. It is to be hoped that this ingenious piece of mechanism has not been irreparably injured by the present bombardment.

The loss of Strasbourg library—a vast collection of 800,000 volumes, including many collections of rare and curious monkish parchments—is total and irreparable. It can never be replaced by any collection hereafter. It was the slow result of a thousand years; and its destruction by fire caused by the Prussian hot shot, is like the burning of the Alexandria library in this, that of a great number of the works destroyed no duplicates can ever be obtained.

ANOTHER "NEW WAY TO PAY OLD DEBTS."—A singular financial transaction occurred in one of the dock offices a day or two since. By some means or other it happened that the office boy owed one of the clerks three cents, the clerk owed the cashier two cents, and the cashier owed the office boy 2 cents. One day last week the office boy having a cent in his pocket concluded to diminish his debt and therefore handed the nickle over to the clerk, who, in turn, paid half his debt by giving the coin to the cashier. The latter handed the cent back to the office boy, remarking, "Now I only owe you one cent." The office boy again passed the cent to the clerk, who passed it to the office boy, and the latter individual squared all accounts paying it to the clerk thereby discharging his entire debt. Thus it may be seen how great is the benefit to be derived from a single cent if only expended judiciously. Buffalo Express.

☞ As daylight can be seen through very small holes, so little things will illustrate a person's character. Indeed, character consists in little acts, habitually and honorably or dishonorably performed; daily life being the quarry from which we build it up and rough hew the habits that form it.

☞ Dr. —— wants to know if you will please to pay this bill now?" Old gentleman looks over the items, and replies: "Tell Dr. —— I'll pay him for his medicines, and return his visits."

☞ "What is home without a mother?" as the young girl said when she sent the old lady to chop wood.

☞ Godliness has the promise of, and secures the blessings of both this and the next world.

☞ Those who tell you of other's faults, will make themselves as free to others of your own.

☞ Modesty in women is like color on her cheek—decidedly becoming if not put on.

☞ When may a smith be said to commit a felony? When he forges.

☞ At what time was Adam married? On his wedding Eve.

The "Globe" has the largest number of readers of any other paper published in the county. Advertisers should remember this.

The Election Doubtful.

Up to the time we go to press, we have nothing definite from the Districts. The majority in this county for Speer is about 550, in Mifflin 20; Blair is estimated at 717 for Morrell, while both parties claim Cambria.

In the Senatorial district the same uncertainty exists, but the probabilities are that one Democrat and one Republican are elected.

The Legislative ticket is probably defeated by a small majority. The County ticket has lost its former majorities, the full vote not being out, but we think it is leceted.

☞ Strasbourg, which recently surrendered to the Prussians, after a close siege of six weeks, was considered one of the most strongly fortified towns in France, and its capture gives the Germans an uninterrupted line of communication with their base of supplies.—General Ulrich and seventeen thousand men were taken prisoners, and the besieging force, some eighty thousand strong, has joined the army operating against Paris. No doubt the capitulation of Strasbourg at that time saved many valuable lives.

☞ Admiral D. G. Farragut's remains now repose in Woodland Cemetery, near New York. He evinced great bravery and ability, as a naval commander during the rebellion. At the Mobile fight he chose a position in the rigging for observing the movements of his fleet, and invoking the protection and guidance of the Almighty, he secured himself with a rope to prevent falling overboard in case he was struck by a rebel bullet. He was a quiet, unassuming gentleman, and seemed utterly unconscious of the renown he had achieved. He has gone, but his memory still lives, and his name will be ranked at the head of the naval heroes of the rebellion.

☞ What shall be done with China and Japan? These two governments, it is said, have fallen back into their selfish ways, and concluded a treaty to exclude foreigners. It will be remembered that it was after many years of diplomacy that either of them allowed commercial relations with the "outer world," but the barbarians, as they call as encroached upon most of their principal cities that were ignorant of the custom worshippers became offended, and resorted to massacreing many of the Christians in their midst. The "barbarians" will have to show them some day, we fear, that they have rights which even Chinese are bound to respect.

☞ A curious and painful scene was witnessed at the burning of a mill on Battle island, near Oswego, a few days ago. The mill was the home of great flocks of swallows and pigeons. While the flames were raging the birds would circle above them in flocks and then dash into them in a body. Hundreds of them were found dead on the ground after the fire. The birds had nests in the mill filled with young ones, which they sought to defend.

☞ The spots on the sun, as viewed through a telescope, at present, are a wonderous and an entertaining spectacle. The arrowpentagon group (in which are five very large spots and many others) stretches in length and breadth quite a fifth across the sun, or nearly 200,000 miles. And there are two or more spots, the umbra or dark part of which is estimated to be at least four times the size of the earth.

☞ It was in 1759 that some ten persons came to John Wesley in London to consult him concerning their spiritual state; they formed the nucleus of the society, which at this hour numbers more than 50,000 preachers, 3,000,000 communicants, and 12,000,000 hearers.

☞ Andrew Johnson has declined a nomination for Congress in Tennessee. The worst fears of his friends are excited.

☞ The Japanese women have very handsome hair, and dress it with more taste and elegance than any other women in the world. How does that sound about the ears of some of our sweet American girls?

THE WAR AND ITS RESULTS.—If we look beyond the ocean into France, where the war has been raging with great violence for some months past, we will see the terrible carnage that has been the result. Not only have towns been captured and the garrisons made prisoners, from Saarbruck to Strasbourg, but the country between has been devastated, and the former inhabitants are crying for bread. One hundred and twenty thousand French prisoners are now in German hands. The killed and wounded of the contending forces aggregate fully one hundred and forty thousand thus far, add to these estimates the survivors in the field and the multitudes who, in one way and another, are connected with the opposing armies, and fully three millions of individuals have exchanged the implements of peace for those of war.

This drain from the agricultural and industrial pursuits will be felt in less than a year, and the demand will be on the United States to supply the breadstuffs; and the prospects now are that our next year's harvests will be called for in advance. Every day's prolongation of the contest furnishes our husbandmen an additional stimulus to plant and sow, and they will be wise who discover the signs of the times and arrange their plans to gather as heavy crops as possible during the coming year. America can lose nothing by the war, but there are few we trust, who long for a continuance of the bloody strife in order to reap large benefits therefrom.

SEX, SUFFRAGE AND STATE POPULATIONS.—In eight States of the Union according to the census of 1870, the female population was in excess of the male. These States were New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Connecticut and Rhode Island. Of these States, Rhode Island showed the greatest proportional excess in female population, it containing 88,355 females to 82,294 males. This result is probably due to the great number of foreign born female operatives who have found steady employment in the Rhode Island factories. In the new census probably nearly all the southern States will show an excess of female over male population, on account of the great number of men who were killed, or who died in camp, during the war. This loss has already been partly made up, however, by immigration, as the new census returns indicate. What is worth noting, perhaps, is that in the Atlantic states, where the population is about equally divided, or where the females are in a slight preponderance, woman's suffrage gets the cold shoulder; but in the inlands states, like Kansas, Wyoming and Nevada, where the males are in great numerical majority, not only is woman's suffrage either conceded or on the point of being conceded but women already fill a good share of the public offices of honor and profit.

☞ It appears to be the intention of some of the Southern people to not let "by-gones be by-gones."—In a Kentucky school a history of the United States has been adopted which devotes a good share of its pages to an apology for the rebellion and an justification of its leaders. Unfortunately for our jealous brethren bowever, its schools have to be supplied with teachers from the North.

☞ General Sheridan has written a letter from the seat of war, saying that he regards the American soldier superior to either the French or Prussian.

What Taxes have been Taken Off.

People are inquiring what taxes have been taken off by the amended Revenue Law, and when the relief takes effect. For their benefit we publish the following:

After the 1st of October, 1870, we shall be wholly relieved from the following taxes, to wit:

1. The tax on carriages, $5 to $10 each.
2. On watches, $1 to $2 each.
3. On billiard tables, $10 each.
4. On silver plate of all kinds, 5 cts. per pound.
5. On gold plate, 50 cents per lb.
6. On passports $5 each.
7. On boats, barges and flats, $5 and $10 each.
8. On gross receipts, including those of railroads, steamboats, canal boats, and all other vessels and stages, 2½ per cent on receipts.
9. On gross receipts of telegraph companies, ferries, bridges and turnpikes, 3 per cent on receipts.
10. On retail dealers (license tax), $10 each.
11. On wholesale dealers, or those whose sales exceed $25,000 a year, $10 each, and $1 additional on every $1000 of sales exceeding $50,000.

These taxes on sale are all repealed, except as regards liquors and tobacco.

12. On banks and bankers, with capital of $50,000, $100 each, and $2 additional on every $1000 of capital above $50,000.
13. On brokers (license), $10 each.

22. Express carriers and agents, $10 each.
23. Miners, assayers, plumbers, photographers, apothecaries, butchers, and eating-house keepers, $10 each.

All these now chargeable with license tax of any kind, except, dealers in spirits and tobacco, are exempted.

24. On canned and preserved fish (now paid by stamps), 1 cent per lb.
25. On bills and receipts, to any amount, and on promissory notes for a less sum than $100 (now paid by stamp), 2 cents and 5 cents each.

All other stamp taxes are continued in force.

26. On legacies and successions, $1 to $6 on every $100 of property devised or inherited, according to the degree of relationship. All repealed.

TAXES REDUCED.

27. On incomes exceeding $2000 for the years commencing January 1st, 1870, and January 1st, 1871, 2½ per cent.

The exemptions, are, in addition to $2000, all taxes and interest paid during the year, losses and bad debts, rents or value of dwelling houses, and amount paid for labor to cultivate land, or to conduct any other business from which income is derived. This is the personal income tax. It is a tolerably easy one.

28. On dividends of all corporations, for the year 1871, including banks, railroad companies, insurance companies, canal and turnpike companies, trust companies, and saving institutions, 2½ per cent.

This tax to be paid by the companies, who may deduct it in disbursing their dividends to the individual holders.

TAX ON TEA AND COFFEE

After the 1st of January, 1871, the duty on tea will be 15 cents a pound, instead of 24; that on coffee 4 cents a pound, instead of 8; sugar will be reduced an average of 1 cent per pound; and spices will be reduced in duty about 05 per cent.

A TERRIBLE SWIM FOR LIFE.—Saturday, at a court martial at Newport barracks, William Bache, a United States soldier, was found guilty of desertion and sentenced to one year's confinement at hard labor.

Yesterday morning, between the first and second roll calls, he was marched out to the guard house under two soldiers and towards the Licking river. Bache broke from his guard and plunged into the Licking, not to drown himself, but to swim to the opposite side, where, he believed, he was at liberty, while behind him he would leave a galley service. The guards cried halt. It was no use. Bache swam on. The two guards fired, but did not hurt him. The whole post guard was called out and ordered to fire on their deserting comrade. Bang, bang, went the guns. Bache was not touched by the scores of balls that splashed the water around his head. On he swam, only the faster toward freedom, away from the hated restraint as the whiz of the minnies increased. The banks of the Licking were lined with people, excited intensely, not heeding the deadly missiles that screamed after the struggling fugitive. One soldier was swimming for life; forty soldiers were sending death's fiercest messengers after him. He was struggling with the waters, with an utter contempt for danger. Six hundred yards from where he plunged in, he came out of the river, fell exhausted but unhurt upon the ground, and was made an easy captive. About a hundred shots had been fired at him. Had he set himself, with but half the energy, about being a good soldier that he did about escaping punishment for being a bad one, his happiness and the good of the service would have been promoted.—Cincinnati Gazette, Oct 3.

☞ The moneys have just been distributed in New York city, and the Roman Catholic schools receive some $180,000, the Protestant schools $82,000, and the Hebrew societies about $6,000. Three Catholic schools receive an aggregate of $31,500, or nearly as much as all the Protestant schools together.

Great Freshet in Virginia.

From all information at hand, by mail and telegraphed, it appears that the principal damage by the freshet in Virginia was along the course of the Shenandoah and the James, and upon those sections of the Orange, Alexandria, and Manasses, Chesapeake and Ohio, Southside, and Virginia and Tennessee and Richmond, and Danville railroads, crossed by those rivers and by various mountain streams.—The losses in the city of Richmond, to merchants and property holders is believed to have amounted to $800,000. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad Co., lose heavily—the whole of the trestling and all the bridges from Harper's Ferry to Shenandoah City being swept away. It is supposed that it will take a month to repair the damages and resume the running of trains on the Winchester branch of Harper's Ferry, Mr. Barbour, the President of the Orange and Alexandria road, telegraphed to Baltimore to day that the damage done will not exceed $50,000. Repairs will probably be completed in ten days. The Petersburg and Lynchburg road loses three bridges, besides considerable damage to the track, amounting in value to about $300,000, probably over the estimate. The James river and Kanawha canal is said to have been damaged to the extent of $350,000. The total losses to railroads and canals, according to the latest estimates, is stated at from $600,000 to $1,000,000. The damage to private property, however, must have been immense—embracing millions—including crops, buildings, and other valuable property along the lines of the deluged water courses.

The loss of Life at Harper's Ferry.

Thirty three persons, living between Shenandoah city and the mouth of the river, are known to have perished, as follows: Benjamin Bateman, his wife and 5 children; James Bateman, wife and 4 children; Adam Bateman; Heaton Myers, wife and 3 children; John Brady; Beckie Harris, colored; (all these had gathered into the large brick house before alluded to;) Mrs. Stipes; Samuel Hoff and Mrs. Eliza Carroll; a daughter of Harry Rusk, colored; and her child; Mr. Lewis, flour merchant, residing six miles above, whose body has been found; also, an unknown colored woman, whose body was found at the roots of a sycamore tree. Mr. James Stipes, who lived on Herr's Island, was with his wife, cut off from escape, and as one building would go down, he would swim with her to another, until finally she was drowned, and he reached the shore on Saturday morning entirely naked. In nearly all instances the furniture in the houses destroyed or damaged was almost wholly ruined. The district school house and Presbyterian church at Harper's Ferry were badly injured.

Summary of War News.

There was a sharp engagement before Paris on Friday of last week, in which the Prussians had the advantage as usual. The French made a sortie against the 5th and 6th Prussian corps. At the end of two hours the French took shelter under the guns of their forts. The German loss was from four to five hundred. The French loss was greater. The Crown Prince commanded the Prussians.

Engagements also occurred on Tuesday and Wednesday last, near Paris, but no results are given.

Paris now has 500,000 troops within her entrenchments. The Parisians are confident that they will be able to maintain their ground and save the city from capture or capitulation. It is also reported that new French armies are rapidly organizing in the south of France. The French prospects are more hopeful—but the Prussians are equally confident.

Marshal Bazaine still holds Metz, and reports his army in excellent condition. The garrison make sorties every day, but are always driven back with loss. Marshal Bazaine still adheres to Napoleon.

☞ The revolution in Italy, in which the natives have been successful, is demonstrating their intense desire for freedom from the dominion of the Pope. This feeling was for some time restrained by the presence of Napoleon's troops, the Emperor being a friend of the Pope; but, when the French were called home, the Romans under Victor Emanuel at once took up arms and advanced on Rome. The Pope, fearing bloodshed, surrendered after a short resistance, and the Italians took possession in the midst of great rejoicing. On Sunday a week last, there was an election at Rome to obtain an expression of opinion from the people whose rule they preferred that of Victor Emanuel or the Pope. The verdict was almost unanimously against the Pope. This result was received with great demonstration by the people, showing that the temporal power of his Highness is about at an end in Italy.

☞ If for some years past we have been a heavily burdened people, we know it was on account of obligations occurred during the rebellion. Now we can rejoice that a score of articles are henceforward to be relieved from taxation. We publish a list of these articles in another column.

☞ Chief Justice Strong has given a decision that any railroad dividend made payable after the 31st of December, 1869, is not subject to the five per cent. decuction by the railroad company, because the railroad company is not obliged to pay to the government.

☞ Trouble is said to be brewing in Utah on account of the proclamation of Governor Shaffer depriving Brigham Young of all control of the militia.

A woman in Kansas city became possessed of the hallucination that her chimney was the Tower of Babel and had it half pulled down before her friends stopped her.

A young man named William Price was recently killed in the Cambria Iron Company's coal mine by a lot of coal and slate falling upon him.

SHAMEFUL.—Last Tuesday evening was the occasion of a wedding in our town, and the event brought out a band of serenaders, who congregated about the door of the dwelling in which the ceremony was to take place and commenced their hideous yells, blowing of horns and pounding of boxes, each one of the crowd vieing with the other in making the loudest noise. The thumping commenced at about 7 and did not cease until the wedding party got aboard the 10:21 train. The conduct of the crowd at the house was shameful in the extreme; some made use of very insulting language, while others threw eggs at the house and at whoever ventured out. Several gentlemen were egged, and had their coats badly soiled in consequence.

We are of the opinion that this kind of serenading should be abolished; and we look to our borough authorities to pass an ordinance to that effect. If this is not a nuisance, we don't know what is, and the sooner our matrimonially disposed friends can enjoy their rights unmolested the better it will be for the community. We hope our borough fathers will impose a heavy penalty on all such offenders, and one example will suffice to break up the outrage.

A TRICKY GAMBLER.—Campbell's Circus or rather self-styled "Zoological and Equestrian Institute," which exhibited in this place recently, is denounced, wherever it has been. The show itself is as good as the common run, but it is strongly suspected that it is kept alive by the card gamblers who accompany it. It is said that this part of the show made over $400 at Belleville, Mifflin county. At that place, a gentleman, accompanied by his wife, went up to the gamblers and having told his wife that he was "up to the game," and was going to make enough to take a trip, he bet $150, but the showman proved that he was the sharpest of the two by bringing up the right card for himself and pocketing the pile. The gentleman's wife complacently gave utterance: "Dear, I guess we'll not take that trip!" He left for reflection.

THE WEATHER AND THE PEOPLE.—We don't know whether to write about the people or the weather, but as each go together and depend on the other it don't make any difference which receive the most attention. Let two men meet on the street, and if it is pouring down rain, one or the other will say, "It is a wet day;" let ladies call on each other, and one of them will be sure to say, if the sun shines, "Isn't this a pleasant day?" Now, we always like to hear people tell the truth, but don't it appear that such truths are unnecessary, as they don't make us any wiser? Why don't people say something else; and tell us how their pulse beats, what they are thinking about, or who they saw last—anything but the weather.

THE ELECTION.—The election is over. Thanks to the Governor's and Sheriff's proclamations for having set a day on which the boiling, bubbling, seething waters of the political pot can find their proper level. What would our nation be, what would our people become, was there election canvasses the whole year round? Men would then be buttonless, notwithstanding the industry of good wives; shoe makers would be continually buying up sole leather; high hats would be at a premium for crowns could not stand the pressure; and, alas, the insane asylums would be crowded, for editors, candidates and politicians would all find a habitation there. Let us be thankful for the peace that has come at last.

MOVED.—Neighbor Cornman, who has been noticing others for improving, deserves now to be remembered, for he also has taken unto himself a new home, adjoining his office. Paint and plaster has been scattered in rich profusion over the domicile, and it is in all respects fit for an editor. We hope some day, however, to see him occupy a three-story brick, or, better, a brown stone. Why not?

WHY IS IT?—Tyrone is to have Olive Logan. So it goeth. Almost every town—some larger and some smaller than Huntingdon can match suit to have big guns to lecture for them, and interest their community thereby. The Young Men's Christian Association of this place tried hard to get the people interested in this kind of enjoyment, last winter, but after some, most miserable failures they gave it up. Our people are to blame, certainly.

LEGAL.—It is not too late to make mention of the fact that our young legal friend Miles Zentmyer, who was recently admitted has fitted up rooms in Cunningham's new building, where he will be pleased to see all who desire his services.

☞ We learn of a change in the management of the Huntingdon Manufacturing Company, Mr. Artley intending to give it his entire attention. We may look for increased business in that wide awake part of our town. The Company intend enlarging the building to accommodate their increasing business.

In Memoriam.

Judge Jonathan McWilliams was born at Spruce Creek, in Huntingdon county, Pa., in the year 1797. His parents were Scotch-Irish, a class of people to whom Pennsylvania is much indebted. He married in 1819, and joined the Presbyterian church the same year. He was elected a Ruling Elder in the Spruce Creek Presbyterian church in 1826, which office he filled with fidelity till five years ago, when on account of his age he declined serving any longer. He was chosen by his fellow-citizens as a member of the State Legislature, in which body he served in the years 1842 and 1843. Possessing a vigorous constitution, and never abusing it, he was never confined to bed a day in his life, till the sickness that in five days took him away in the seventy-third year of his age.

The deceased was a man of marked characteristics, well worthy of imitation. A blacksmith by trade, he entered by his honest toil a competency for his family. Denied an education, by diligent application and select reading he stored his mind with useful information, and became a man of extensive acquirements. Early in life he was impressed with a sense of his responsibility to society and to God.—He felt that he was placed here for a purpose, and he resolved to meet the demand as God should give him power. Hence he studiously avoided all manner of dissipation of both body and mind. He was always an advocate of every measure that promised to elevate the human race. Thirty years ago he stood alone in his county the open enemy of human slavery; and has frequently been heard to express his gratitude that he had lived to see that stain on our national honor wiped out. His pen, as well as his tongue, was frequently employed against oppressions and wrongs and in behalf of liberty, truth and right-ousness. He was a firm believer in the truths of revealed religion. His conversation was in Heaven, Christ was his favorite theme. His reliance for salvation was solely in the Redeemer. None need ask how he died, we know how he lived, and that is enough.

Five years ago he settled in McVeytown. He seemed to feel that his end was near. He wished to spend his remaining days in quietude, and as he walked along our streets, or sat at our firesides, he appeared as one who was ready and waiting for the summons from above, "come up." Once, indeed, a few weeks before his demise, seized his pen and wrote a few articles for the Press, warning the young against the corruptions of the times, and urging the selection of sober, honest men to places of trust; and when the last article was concluded, he said: "That is the old man's last contribution to the cause of his country."

On the morning of the 2nd of September, at his residence, in the presence of his family, his spirit took its departure, committed to the keeping of that Saviour in whom he trusted.—There is a gap in the ranks of society now; but we are rich in the memory of one who, "though dead, yet speaketh." T.—Lewistown Gazette.

☞ The election yesterday brought out the colored men to the polls in this place, many of them casting their first vote. We do not know of one Democrat who staid away on that account, but one voter was heard to exclaim, as if deeply mortified, "My God, has it come to this?" The colored men appeared to realize the importance of their newly-found right and also the importance of the party that gave them the right, for they nearly all voted the Republican ticket, and swore vengeance upon the few that didn't.

On the 29th September, by Rev. L. D. Steckel, Mr. JOSEPH HESS to Miss MARGARET ANN STATES, both of McConnellstown.

At the parsonage, Sept. 27, 1870, by Rev. J. M. Rice, Mr. JOSEPH E. ARNOLD of Mifflin county, to Miss VIOLET JANE DAVIS, of Huntingdon county.

On the 29th September, by Rev. J. D. Thomas, Mr. D. W. LOGAN to Miss MARGARET CORNPROPST, both of Barree township.

DIED,

Near Orbisonia, September 22d, CHARLES EDGAR, son of J. M. and C. M. Booher, aged 2 years, 9 months and 6 days.

In Shirleysburg, October 1st, 1870 HERBERT MONTEGUE, son of Genl. F. H. Lane, aged 8 months and 20 days.

Near Saltillo, Huntingdon county, on September 19th, SAMUEL EDGAR, youngest son of George W. and Margaret Cobill, aged 2 years.

In the commencement of his sickness he suffered much, but as death approached he seemed to suffer no pain, but as if closing his eyes in a gentle sleep, he sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. Little Eddie had learned to sing several tunes, among others the chorus "Clinging to the Cross." This was his favorite piece, and the last words he said were "Clinging, Clinging," trying to sing this chorus. Poor little Eddie was clinging to the Cross, and was unconscious of it. Bereft friends, sorrow not for your dear boy, "even as others which have no hope." He is not lost but gone before.

A NEW BOOK of the greatest interest and importance. Written from a high moral and physiological standpoint by an eminent physician and medical professor, it shows how Satan is working out his subtle and dangerous designs through our most sacred domestic and social plan-tations. Pure-minded, but outspoken and aggressive, the author handles the delicate subjects treated of without gloves, but in such a manner as not to minister to a prurient curiosity. The Physical Regeneration of the Race, is a subject justly enlisting the interest and sympathy of all true philanthropists, and this book, it is believed, will contribute to that end just in proportion as it has readers. ROSADALIS

THE Great American Health Restorer, purifies the blood and cures Scrofula, Syphilis, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Diseases of Women and all Chronic Affections of the Blood, Liver and Kidneys. Recommended by the Medical Faculty and thousand of our best citizens.

Read the testimony of Physicians and patients who have used Rosadalis and send for Rosadalis Guide to Health or Almanac for this year, which we publish for gratuitous distribution; it will give you much valuable information.

Dr. R. W. Carr, of Baltimore says:

I take pleasure in recommending your Rosadalis as a very powerful alterative. I have seen it in two cases with happy results—one in case of scrofula of long standing, which is rapidly improving under its use, and the indications are that the patient will soon recover. I have carefully examined the formula by which your Rosadalis is made, and find it an excellent compound of all alterative ingredients.

Dr. Sparks, of Nicholasville, Ky., says he has used Rosadalis in cases of scrofula and secondary Syphilis with satisfactory results—as a cleaner of the blood I know no better remedy.

Samuel G. McFadden, Murfreesboro' Tennessee, says:

I have used seven bottles of Rosadalis, and am entirely cured of Rheumatism; send me four bottles as I wish it for my brother, who has scrofulous sore eyes.

Benjamin Bechtol, of Lima, Ohio, writes, I have suffered for twenty years with an inveterate eruption over my body; in short time since I purchased a bottle of Rosadalis and it effected a perfect cure.

Rosadalis is sold by John Read and S. S. Smith, Huntingdon, Pa., and Druggists generally.

WHAT I KNOW OF FARMING.

BY HORACE GREELEY.

XXXII.

A LESSON OF TO-DAY.

The current season is quite commonly characterized as the coldest, the hottest, the wettest, or the dryest, that was ever known. Men undoubtingly assert that they never knew a Summer so hot, or a Winter so cold, when in fact several such have occurred within the cycle of their own experience. Hardly anything else is so easily or so speedily forgotten as extremes of temperature or inclemencies of weather, after they have passed away. I presume there have been six or ten Summers, since the beginning of this century, as hot and as dry as the present; yet the fact remains that, throughout the Eastern section of our country, to say nothing of the rest, the heat and drouth of the current Summer have been quite remarkable. For two months past, counting from the 10th of June, nearly every day has been a hot one, with blazing sunshine throughout, rarely interrupted and slightly modified by infrequent and inadequate showers; and, as a general result of this tropical fervor, the earth is parched and baked from ten to forty inches from the surface; streams and ponds are dried up or shrunk to their lowest dimensions; forests are often ravaged and desolated by fires; our pastures are dry and brown; while crops of Hay, Oats, Potatoes, Buckwheat, &c., either have proved, or certainly must prove, a disappointment to the hopes of the growers. I estimate the average product for 1870 of the farms of New England, east of New York and New Jersey, as not more than two-thirds of a full harvest; while the earth remains at this moment so baked and incrusted that several day's rain is needed to fit it for Fall-plowing and the sowing of the Winter Grain.

Such seasons must not be regarded as extraordinary. The Summer of 1854 was nearly or quite as dry as this; and I presume one or two such have intervened since that time. The heat of 1870 is remarkable for its persistence rather than its intensity.—Every Summer has its heated term; that of 1870 has been longer in this region than any before it that I can remember, though doubtless the recollection of others might supply its perfect counterpart. Nearly every Summer has its drouth; the present is peculiar rather for its early commencement than its extreme duration. As our country is more and more denuded of its primitive forests, drouths longer and severer even than this may naturally be expected. What our farmers have to do is, to prepare for and provide against them.

Such seasons are disastrous to those only who farm as if none such were to be expected. Those who plow deeply, fertilize bountifully, and cultivate thoroughly, need not fear them, as fields of Hay and Oats already harvested, and of Corn and Potatoes now hastening to maturity in almost every township of the suffering region abundantly attest. I doubt that more luxuriant crops of Corn, Tobbaco, or Onions, were ever grown on the bottom-lands of the Connecticut Valley than may be seen there to-day, with failures all about them, and under drouth so fierce that Blackberries and Whortleberries are withered when half grown; even the bushes in some cases perishing for lack of moisture.

My last trip took me along the banks of the upper Hudson, through the rugged county of Warren, N. Y. The narrow, irregular intervale of this mountain stream appears to have been cultivated for the last fifty or sixty years by a hardy race, who look mainly to the timber of the wild region north of them for a subsistence. In such a district, whatever ministers to the sustenance of man or beast bears a high price; and Corn, Rye, Oats, Buckwheat, Apples and Grass, are grown wherever the soil is not too rugged or too sterile for culture. I presume half a crop of hay has been secured throughout this valley, with perhaps a full crop of Rye where Rye was sown; but of Oats the yield will be considerably less than that, while of Corn and Buckwheat it will range from ten bushels per acre down to nothing. When I, last Summer, passed through spacious field after field of Corn in Virginia that would not mature a single ear, I spoke of it as something unknown at the North; but there are fields planted to corn, in the upper valley of the Hudson, that will not produce a single sound ear, nor one bushel even of the shortest and poorest nubbins; and alongside of these are acres of Buckwheat, blossoming at an average hight of four inches, and not likely to get two inches higher.

Now, if this land were so poor or so rocky that good crops could not be extracted from it, far be it from me to disparage the agriculture whereof the results are so meager; but I am speaking of a river intervale of considerable natural fertility, from which deep and thorough cultivation would insure ample harvests, subject only to the contingency of early frosts in Autumn.—Were these lands fertilized and cultivated as they might be, and as mine are, they would yield 30 bushels of Rye or 60 of Indian Corn per acre, and would richly repay the husbandman's outlay and efforts. Now, I venture to say that all the Grain I saw growing in the valley of the Hudson through Warren county, will not return the farmers 75 cents for each day's labor expended thereon, allowing nothing for the use of the land.

"But how shall we obtain fertilizers?" I am often asked. "We are poor; we can afford to keep but few cattle; Guano, Phosphate, Bones, Lime, &c., are beyond our means.—Even if we could pay for them, the cost of transportation to our out-of-the-way nooks would be heavy. We cannot deal with our lands so bountifully as you do, but must be content to do as we can."

To which I make answer: No man ever lacked fertilizers who kept his eyes wide open and devoted two months of each Fall and Winter to collecting and preparing them. Wherever swamp muck may be had, wherever bogs exist or flags or rushes grow, there are materials which, carted into the barn-yard in Autumn, or winter, may be drawn out fertilizers in season for corn-planting next Spring. Wherever a pond or slough dries up in Summer, or Autumn, there is material that may be profitably transformed into next year's grass or grain. In the absence of all these—and they are seldom very far from one who knows how to look for them—rank weeds of all sorts, if cut while green and tender, or forest leaves, gathered in the Fall, used for litter in the stable, and thence thrown into the yard, will serve an excellent purpose. Nay, more: I am confident that the farmer who lacks these, but has access to a bed or bank of simple clay, may cart 200 loads of it in November into an ordinary farm-yard, have it trampled into and mixed with his manure in the Winter, and draw it out in the Spring, excellently fitted to enrich his sandy or gravelly land, and insure him in connection with deep and thorough culture, a generous yield of Corn, even in such a season as the present. Dr. George B. Loring, the most successful farmer in Massachusetts, uses naked beach-sand in abundance as litter for his 80 cows, mixes it with his manure throughout the Winter, and draws out the compound to fertilize his clay meadows in the Spring, with most satisfactory results. Depend on it, no man need lack fertilizers who begins in season and is willing to work for them.

And yet once more:

From the hills which inclose this valley of the upper Hudson (and from over so many other valleys as well), brooks and rivulets, copious in Spring, when their waters are surcharged and discolored by the richest juices of the uplands, pour down in frequent cascades and dance across the intervale to be lost in the river. There is scarcely an acre of that intervale which might not be irrigated from these streams at a very moderate outlay of work at the season when work is least pressing: the water thus held back by dams being allowed to flow thence gently and equably across the intervale, conveying not moisture only, but fertility also, to every plant growing thereon. I am confident that I passed many places on the upper Hudson, as well as the Connecticut and Ammonoosuc where 200 faithful days' work providing for irrigation would have given 100 bushels of grain, or ten tuns of hay, additional this year, and as much per annum henceforth, at a cost of not more than two days' work in each year hereafter.

Farmers, but above all farmers' sons, think of these things.

ADDRESS

TO THE

NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED.

WHOSE SUFFERINGS HAVE BEEN PROTRACTED

FROM HIDDEN CAUSES, AND WHOSE

CASES REQUIRE

PROMPT TREATMENT.

TO RENDER EXISTENCE DESIRABLE

If you are suffering, or have suffered, from involuntary discharges, what effect does it produce upon your general health? Do you feel weak, debilitated, easily tired? Does a little extra exertion produce palpitation of the heart? Does your liver, or urine organs, or your kidneys, get out of order? Is your urine sometimes thick, milky or flocky, or is it ropy on settling? Or does a thick skum rise to the top? Or is a sediment at the bottom after it has stood awhile? Do you have spells of short breathing or dyspepsia? Are your bowels constipated? Do you have spells of fainting, or rushes of blood to the head? Is your memory impaired? Is your mind constantly dwelling on this subject? Do you feel dull, listless, moping, tired of company, of life? Do you wish to be left alone, to get away from everybody? Does any little thing make you start or jump? Is your sleep broken or restless? Is the lustre of your eye as bright? Do you enjoy yourself in society as well? Do you pursue your business with the same energy? Do you feel as much confidence in yourself? Are your spirits dull and flagging, given to fits of melancholy? If so, do not lay it to your liver or dyspepsia. Have you rest less nights? Your back weak, your knees weak, and have but little appetite, and you attribute this to dyspepsia or liver complaint?

Now, reader, self-abuse, venereal diseases badly cured, and sexual excesses, are all capable of producing a weakness of the generative organs. The organs of generation, when in perfect health, make the man. Did you ever think that those bold, defiant, energetic, persevering, successful business men are always those whose organs are in perfect health? You never hear such men complain of being melancholy, of nervousness, of palpitation of the heart. They are never afraid they cannot succeed in business; they don't become sad and discouraged, they are always polite and pleasant in company of ladies, and look you and them right in the face—none of your downcast looks or any other meanness about them. I do not mean those who keep the organs inflated by running to excess. These will not only ruin their constitution, but those they do business with or for.

How many men, from badly cured diseases, from the effects of self abuse and excesses, have brought about that state of weakness in these organs that has reduced the general system so much as to induce almost every other disease—idiocy, lunacy, paralysis, spinal affections, suicide, and almost every form of disease humanity is heir to—and the real cause of the trouble scarcely ever suspected, and have doctored for all but the right one.

COUGHS, SORE THROAT, ETC

No medicine or treatment can excel the powerful curative power of

DR. SIMMS'

WHITE PULMONIC BALSAM.

It cures with a rapidity unequalled by any other remedy offered for throat and lung diseases. It is recommended by over 2,000 persons in Wilmington, and hundreds in Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities and communities throughout the country. Mr. Pennington, of Wilmington, Illinois, writes that he is not (with a few exceptions) a family in that city who will be without it if possible to procure it. Such is its popularity wherever it is known—and this popularity arises from the fact that it universally cures all who use it. There is no case of

COUGHS, COLDS, SORE THROAT,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, CROUP,

BLOOD SPITTING, HOARSENESS, and even Pulmonary Consumption, where the system is not broken down with the wear of the disease, or pretended medicine, or inexperienced advice, that this Balsam will not cure if carefully used according to directions. We guarantee it all we represent it be, and invite a trial from the afflicted everywhere. Price 50 cts., used-up size, and $1 for large size bottles. Prepared only by
